KING EXPECTED TO ASK HIM TO FORM CABINET

'Caretaker' Government To Rule Britain Until Election Is Held

(Continued from Page One) Britain's 10-year-old parliament will be dissolved to make way for the general election three weeks after the king issues a formal notice that the present government has resigned. Churchill drove from 10 Downing street to Buckingham palace in a closed automobile with his personal flag as lord warden of Cinque ports flying from the radiator. Only two or three persons at the palace gates recognized Churchill. He was dressed in a black coat and hat and appeared serious and preoccupied. It was just a little more than five years ago that he was summoned by the king to the palace to form a new government to supplant that of Neville Chamberlain. Then the German armies were invading Belgium and Holland and striking toward France. Within the next few weeks, they overran both Belgium and Holland and France surrendered.

Rallied Empire The British expeditionary force escaped from Dunkerque, but Britain stood alone against Germany with only enough arms for a single division. Churchill rallied the empire behind the cry, "We shall not flag or fail," and carried on to final victory in Europe and the Middle-East.

By the time Churchill emerged from the palace shortly before 1 a. m. today, a small crowd had gathered and cheered as his car passed through the gates.

Labor Talks Foreign Policy The laborites in convention at Blackpool were talking foreign policy. Delegates adopted as the party policy a proposal by Bevin that Britain cooperate with the United States and Russia to "remove fear."

"At the back of the people's minds there is a fear that without the small eastern states as a springboard against the Soviet Union—that the Soviet Union may some day use them against us," Bevin said.

"There may be lurking fears, but I have not got them." He opposed limiting production and "using scarcity to keep up prices," opposed a return to the gold standard, favored a fixed minimum wage and maximum work hour standards throughout the world, international control of raw materials, and collective security in the world with policing forces to maintain it.

"In all the states of Europe we are anxious to create a situation where there may be free and democratic elections—where they can choose their own government," Bevin said.

"We pledge ourselves in our foreign policy never to use these small states to play off against the big states and so get an advantage."

BALLOON BOMBS NOT EFFECTIVE

The Army and Navy announcement did not say where the balloon bombs were coming from but a Canadian announcement that some had also landed in Canada suggested they came from Japanese territory. They might, however, be launched from submarines.

Prevailing winds are such that balloon-bombs launched from the Kuriles or certain areas of the North Pacific would drift over western Canada and the United States if they could stay aloft long enough.

The longest flight on record for a balloon of over 4000 cubic meters is 1,896 miles, set in Germany in 1914. Records for smaller balloons are shorter.

Thus it would seem no mean achievement if the Japanese have managed to construct balloons that will carry explosives from the Kuriles, even though the attacks are ineffective.

If the balloons actually are launched from that distance, many must go down at sea short of their objective or be swept away by wind currents turning towards the south. Many more than have been found or observed may have gone off harmlessly in the vast waste of mountains, forests and deserts of the western part of the United States and Canada.

If the balloons are launched from submarines the weight of the attack never can be severe. The undersea craft, travelling long distances from their bases, could not carry many bombs. Many of those launched from submarines might go down at sea or strike harmlessly in the mountains.

Although the Germans developed a far more potent weapon than balloon-bombs—the V-bombs—and although they had U-boats in the Atlantic off the American coast they never found it practical to launch this type of weapon against the United States.

Big 4 Experts Wrestle With Demands For Veto Power Modifications

President to come here for the final session.

Here are some of the issues that do not bear directly on the drafting of a charter but are nevertheless threatening to take some minds off the basic job here:

An intra-United Nations family squabble involving delegates to this conference, Syria and Lebanon, having broken off negotiations with France on a new treaty, protested the French action of sending Senegalese troops to those former French mandates. Delegates of the two near eastern republics used a conference auditorium to accuse France of sending the troops to pressure them into acceding to French demands for special privileges.

Raising of the Polish issue again by Ukrainian Foreign Minister Dmitri Z. Manuilski. He reiterated the Soviet charge that the 16 arrested Polish underground leaders had jeopardized the Red army and indirectly said that they had shot Russian troops in the back.

Despite these developments, the work of the conference sped along at a fast pace. Committees are approving section after section of the charter and will be ready for final drafting and coordination this week.

The highlights of latest committee work on the charter included: Decision to leave the door open for creation of a "travelling" general assembly.

Adoption of a proposal to exclude from the world charter any provision for withdrawal of a member state or expulsion of a member by the organization. Also adopted plans to strengthen greatly the Dumbarton Oaks clause on suspension of members. The old League of Nations was always plagued by the right of nations to withdraw legally whenever they didn't like decisions.

The United States and Great Britain gathered sufficient support to defeat a Belgian proposal which would have provided that "no member may evade obligations of the charter by invoking the provisions of its internal law."

The long-debated American compromise formula for linking the inter-American system with the world organization—without limiting the paramountcy of the world organization and without jeopardizing the right of self de-definitely" as long as they hold useful jobs.

DRAFT BOARD REVIEWS CASES

At the upper end of the scale men 40 years old and over may be discharged upon application.

Although the armed forces do not want any more men 30-38 they will, however, be taken if they do not make an effort to contribute to what selective service calls "the national health, safety or interest." Local boards have full authority to say which jobs fit that description.

With the Army cutting down its present force of 8,300,000 to approximately 6,068,000 and the Navy scheduled to reach its full strength approximately 4,030,000 by June 30, draft calls are to be about 90,000 in July and succeeding months. Unexpected success in the Pacific could make further reductions possible. Currently calls are 120,000. They have been over 100,000 for several months.

Besides the 45 per cent of the July call-up composed of youths reaching draft age 33 per cent of the balance will come from men 18-23. The remaining 22 per cent will come from men 26-29 with a few 30 and over.

About 100,000 youths become 18 each month. Of these, approximately 70,000 are of the caliber needed for combat replacements. But not all can be inducted immediately, some not at all for various reasons. Usually around 30,000 enter service.

The numbers of available 18-25 and 26-29 year olds have dropped considerably in the past year. The few hundreds of thousands still deferred on farms and in war plants will be weeded out and replaced as far as possible by returning veterans, older men and service personnel released under the Army's redeployment program. The Army today began calling back men who had been furloughed to industry to help in critical production fields hampered by manpower shortages.

Selective service said stricter deferment standards were being drawn up for men 26 through 29. These will be issued shortly. Local boards were ordered to review all cases involving men 18-25 who are classified physically unfit for service. Presumably some of these men will be inducted. Undoubtedly some of the physical and mental ailments have been cured since the men were classified or can be corrected in the service.

DISAGREEMENTS DELAY TRIALS OF CRIMINALS

By United Press

A growing barrier of inter-Allied suspicion and disagreement threatened today to delay for months, the trial and punishment of some 2,500 Nazi war criminals, headed by Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering.

Authoritative Washington and London reports said the United Nations war crimes commission was going ahead steadily with investigating the thousands of atrocities charged to the Germans and Japanese and returning indictments against their perpetrators.

The commission was understood to have indicated 2,600 war criminals—about 100 of them believed to be Japanese and the rest high-ranking Nazis—but there appeared little likelihood that they would be brought to trial until the United Nations reached agreement on procedure.

Washington informants said the other Allied powers have not yet accepted the American plan to try the major Nazi offenders before an international military tribunal.

IRAN WANTS BIG THREE TROOPS TO MOVE OUT

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23—

Iran has sent polite diplomatic notes to the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union reminding them that they are pledged to remove their troops from Iran within six months after the end of the European war, it was revealed here today.

Dr. Mostafa Meshbahzadeh, former head of the Iranian propaganda and press department, told the United Press that the Iranian people believe the foreign troops should leave as quickly as possible now that the war with Germany is ended.

He said the notes to the big three were very amiable, merely pointing out the treaty obligations of those nations to withdraw their troops. Technically the big three could keep their troops in Iran until next November.

drenching rains and mud slowed operations.

From 12 to 15 Japanese planes attacked American shipping in the Okinawa area Monday evening but caused no damage. Eight of the raiders were shot down.

The Japanese Domei agency said that Japanese planes seriously damaged a converted American aircraft carrier off Okinawa today.

American naval planes sank three small cargo ships and three fishing craft south of Honshu in raids Monday and Tuesday. They also shot down a Japanese glider and probably its tow plane.

Formosa Raided

Bombers from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command raided Formosa for the seventh straight day.

A spokesman at MacArthur's headquarters said that although Australian and Dutch troops were reported virtually to have completed conquest of Tarakan off East Borneo, Japanese forces on the island were almost intact.

He said the Japanese had organized defensive positions in the hills and that the Australians were going ahead cautiously with efforts to clean up the defenders.

JAPS DEMAND INDEMNITY FOR AWA MARU SINKING

By United Press

Japan today demanded that the United States pay indemnity, apologize and punish those responsible for the sinking of the Japanese relief ship Awa Maru.

The Awa Maru was sunk by a submarine April 26 in Japanese waters while traveling under safe conduct. The United States conceded that an American submarine sank a Japanese ship in that general vicinity, but said it was traveling unlighted and off the planned course of the Awa Maru.

HITLER'S BIG MISTAKE

HITLER'S greatest mistake was not his attack on Russia or his failure to follow up the invasion of Britain. He should have attacked the United States first. In two wars this country has been the arsenal of the democratic nations, and the main source of the manpower which eventually overthrew Germany. If a surprise assault had been made, especially if at the same time with one by Japan, he might have put us out of the war for years.

Though President Roosevelt realized our peril, most Americans had to be educated to it, and led to war by such preliminary steps as the trade of destroyers for naval bases, and lend-lease. Congress did not see the danger; only two weeks before Pearl Harbor an attempt to abolish conscription failed in the House of Representatives by only a single vote. Despite the administrator's efforts we were not in 1940 in a position to oppose a blitzkrieg effectively.

Now that two wars have taught this lesson, it is safe to say that a third aggressor will try to put the United States out of commission first. We must either be fully prepared for war, with all that involves, or support an effective international organization for permanent peace.

CHEATERS

FROM now on, our nation, while fighting with one hand, will be engaged in using the other for larger production of civilian goods. It will bring a grateful relief to the millions of households that have cheerfully done their patriotic duty of living sparely while working hard.

It must be admitted, for the sake of truth and fairness, that many others have not behaved so well. Perhaps some millions could be counted—if it were worth the trouble and shame—who have tried to get, or keep, more than their share. The war is not over yet, and many may continue trying to take unfair advantage.

These are blots upon the otherwise noble war record of the American people. Cheaters would be wise to repent and go straight from now on, enjoying the satisfaction of being able to look their neighbors straight in the eye.

Seven Greek cities claimed the honor of being the birthplace of their national poet Homer. More than that number of countries will claim the privilege of trying the Nazi chiefs.

Says a philosophic thumb-pounder, "It was almost worth enduring the Nazis through those terrible years, for the joy of getting rid of them."

Question asked all over the country: Does victory over Germany mean more cigarettes?

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 23 — Unemployment is developing in Detroit and Chicago, although not much is being said about it. Some also is apparent in Cleveland. I have heard the figure of 3,000,000 mentioned, but I think it is far too high.

This marks the shrinking demand for the heavier war goods—tanks, armored cars, trucks.

When shrinkage extends to munitions and shells sometime soon, the problem will become national.

While Mr. Truman has succeeded unbelievably well in handling the initial problems thrust upon him, he is heading for trouble on this one. To meet the gradually opening new condition, his associates are preparing to grant wage increases.

The new economic equivocator, William H. Davis, was not clear in his talks with interested congressional committees last week, but he seemed to advocate 48 hours' pay for 40 hours work, which is just what the CIO auto workers have been demanding (with trimmings).

This would be a flat 20 per cent wage-hike, but there has been talk of a 30 to 40 per cent elevation, and some of the union's additional demands could work the rate up to that incredible figure (incredible in view of recently stable price trends and the promise of lower cost autos for the public).

The unions have begun to needle Mr. Truman in the same way they pushed Mr. Roosevelt painfully about. A west coast radio station has reported AFL's boss there, Dave Beck, has begun to talk of the Republican Stassen for the presidency in 1948, and has mentioned the Massachusetts Republican Saltonstall as a good man for vice president on this far-away ticket. The broadcast was unquestionably prepared for White House perusal.

The sharpest and most needles are, however, being wielded by the AFL economist, Boris Shushkin and CIO spokesman on OPA, Donald Montgomery, both are aiming particularly at OPA administrator Chester Bowles and the war agencies.

Shushkin, who incidentally is a wee bit pinker than the average color inside AFL, and, therefore, more in line with the CIO front, has been critical of the war agencies for under-estimating employment, allowing cutbacks of production, etc.

Montgomery has centered upon Mr. Bowles' assertion that prices could be increased in post-war because of the higher cost of raw materials.

Montgomery figured out a new factor—answer to that one, raising a point of the increased productivity of labor, its ability to turn out more per man due to war-developed efficiencies. Indeed, I have heard on good authority that increased productivity of men has run 100 per cent higher than three years ago in some cases.

But where Montgomery is off line is in his conclusion that this same improved efficiency of war products can be carried on into peace-time production of new products. He has not proved that yet, and until he does, he will not have proved this cause for a wage increase.

So the inner battle waxes along familiar lines with Mr. Truman in the center. The reconversion program of his top coordinator Vinson is not popular either in congress or in business quarters, where no one I have yet encountered believes it can do the job.

How much good the wage increases will accomplish also is subject to objective questioning. The basic economic idea be-

An Infectious Disease With Different Sets of Symptoms

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

DISEASES often have signs and symptoms which are quite similar. Hence, it becomes a difficult matter to tell one of these disorders from another. This is true of a condition known as infectious mononucleosis which occurs rather frequently and the symptoms of which are much like those of other disorders. Thus, Doctor William H. Walker of the Medical Corps of the United States Army, reports that of 29 cases of infectious mononucleosis which he saw in a period of a year, only three had been correctly diagnosed.

Infectious Mononucleosis

In infectious mononucleosis, the symptoms may fall into six different groups. In one there may be sore throat, dry cough and pain under the breastbone. In another type there may be high fever up to 105 which lasts for from one to three weeks. In still another group there may be marked enlargement of the lymph glands throughout the body. In a fourth group there may be a skin rash. In other patients the symptoms may affect the nervous system particularly with persistent headache, and in the last variety there may be diarrhea, vomiting and pain in the abdomen.

Doctor Walker does not believe that infectious mononucleosis is a harmless disease, but states that complications may occur such as sinus infection, middle ear infection and what is known as atypical pneumonia produced probably by a virus, which is an organism so small that it can pass through the openings in a porcelain filter.

In making a diagnosis of infectious mononucleosis, a test known as the Paul-Bunnell test is employed. This is a test which is carried out by using the blood cells from a sheep and mixing them with the blood serum from the sick person. If infectious mononucleosis is present, the blood serum of the patient will agglutinate or clump.

Other symptoms which may be present in infectious mononucleosis consist of enlargement of the spleen, an increase in the number of white cells in the blood and weakness. Sometimes abnormal forms of white cells may be present.

In so far as treatment is concerned, Doctor Walker thinks that sulfadiazine given by mouth will speed up recovery by having a favorable effect on the throat infection which is present in many cases. This treatment with sulfadiazine should be continued for from one to two weeks beyond the acute stage of the disease. This will help in preventing recurrent nose, throat, and lung infections, as well as other complications.

Infectious mononucleosis is one of those disorders which must be diagnosed by the doctor and once it is found to be present, should be vigorously treated by him.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Inane conversation. Anything to bridge the gap of unspoken words, unspoken accusations, unspoken hopes. Gail's eyes met his. And there was sudden panic in her eyes, a kind of inexplicable wonder in his. Burke asked boyishly, "How do you like my uniform, Gail?"

"You look beautiful," she said. They stood in uncomfortable silence, Gail was very conscious of Mrs. Gentry's glances that said: Why are you here? Why must you interfere with a mother's farewell to her only son?

Burke looked at the big station clock. "I guess we'd better get started. The train must be made up by now." A porter picked up his luggage, led them toward the train shed. Mrs. Gentry continued to cling to Burke.

At last it was time for the train to pull out. Burke looked hesitantly at the two women.

"Burke—Mrs. Gentry said, 'As soon as you know where you'll be permanently stationed, I'll close the house and come to you.'"

"That'll be swell, mother." He took the older woman in his arms, kissed her gently. Then he looked at Gail, flustered and uncertain.

Gail hesitated, then held out her hand. "Goodbye, Burke. Good luck." As his train drew out, Gail was appalled at her relief. What's the matter with us anyway? she thought. The man I've loved for years has left, perhaps forever, and I stand here, wondering how soon and how gracefully I can get away from his mother!

"May I find a taxi for you, Mrs. Gentry?" she asked.

"Thank you, not yet," Mrs. Gentry said firmly. "Ah—Miss Benton, I should like to speak to you, and this seems a reasonable time. Shall we go into the waiting room and sit down? It won't take long."

Gail said gently, "I think I know what you want to say, Mrs. Gentry. If you fear that Burke and I got married before he left—or that we plan to get married on one of his leaves—I assure you that you're mistaken. You still have your son, Mrs. Gentry. At least I'll never take him away from you."

It was true. She knew now that Burke had failed her. Like her career. Like her world. Like everything. . . .

Katie stamped around the house, her dyed hair bristling, her fat face openly belligerent. The woman with her looked like a pouter pigeon, but surveyed the rooms with the eyes of a hawk.

"You mean there is no dining room in the house?"

"No, ma'am." Katie's curt voice implied that it was vulgar to have a dining room.

"Well, possibly we could fix up the doctor's office for a dining room."

She'd have to cut a door through to the kitchen, of course.

When Pouter Pigeon left, Katie returned to her kitchen, slamming the door for emphasis. This terrible town! The way they were treating poor Dr. Benton. It'd serve them right if the Army took all the doctors and didn't leave a one in town!

She was relieved to see that Gail was coming up the front walk with Stephen McCormick. It was a good thing, Katie decided, that she had somebody to pay attention to her, what with Mr. Gentry gone away.

Gail came into the kitchen, saying, "Mr. McCormick is going to help me do a bit of moving today."

"What's the hurry?" Katie demanded. "You don't have to get out of here for two more weeks."

"Well, the painters will want to get in." She went back to Stephen who was waiting in the living room.

"Where do we start first?" she asked.

"On the books, I suppose. You've got plenty of them!" He took a roll of twine from his gray tweed jacket. "I'll need your help, Gail."

Presently the back seat of her car was piled high with books. Then the flower painting Burke had given her last Christmas, the lamps, the modern white bric-a-brac.

Gail stood at the door, while Steve took things out, trying not to cry because the things she'd worked so hard for, and acquired so patiently and lovingly, were being taken out of the house. Strangers would sleep in her bedroom, entertain in her sitting room, bake in her kitchen. . . .

She got into the car. Steve drove to the apartment house which faced the River Basin. Gail had rented the doctor's suite on the ground floor. It was a small, four-room flat.

She unlocked the door, and they went in. Four blank walls for a greeting.

"Welcome home, Gail," she announced.

Steve said gently, "A very temporary home, I hope, Gail."

She moved over to the window, watched the tugs plough down the silver breast of the river. She said, "You know, I almost ran away from this last week. I thought seriously of joining the WAACS. Not as a doctor, either."

"Look, Gail—his gray eyes were earnest, his angular face intense—"you know you can't run away from yourself."

She sat down on the window sill. "But, Steve," she said earnestly, "I've been so tormented by the terrific conviction that I've muddled through other cases, the way I did with Reyna Thayer."

"Gail," he protested, "you're developing an awful inferiority complex—and it'll make a lame duck of you if you don't watch out. About Reyna Thayer's case—when father examined her, he wasn't sure of a diagnosis either. And when he ordered that drug stopped, he should have told you Reyna Thayer's history."

"Gail was silent."

"Until now, Gail," Stephen spoke carefully, "you've very definitely had a chip on your shoulder, about your work. But," he put his hand on her arm, "you've lost it now, forever. I wish Father had learned the same lesson, from his first big mistake. What is more, his patient died."

"I didn't know that."

"Lucienne Thayer's mother died in childbirth, under Father's care and Father has always believed it was his fault. That's why he's such a genius at Caesarean sections now."

Gail could not meet his eyes. She turned away, to meet her own private little Gethsemane.

After a while he said simply, "But you see Father never learned humility, and you have, Gail."

Humility. Such an old-fashioned word. Yet the way Steve said it. Humility. She thought suddenly: Dear Heaven, is that why I refused to marry Burke? Because I'd discovered a new set of standards? Involving humility?

If Burke had been called to service a month ago, Gail was sure she'd have married him secretly, just as he proposed. But the Saturday he left town for Louisiana, she'd been paralyzed with indecision.

Now the reason was clear: Burke had been identified with her pride, her feminine stubbornness about getting the man she thought she wanted. Somewhere that stiff pride of hers had vanished and with it her need of Burke.

"You have no right to lose faith in yourself," Steve persisted. "You've just got to fight all the harder."

Her white face colored slightly. "All right," she said, "We'll begin by fixing up this waiting room."

Now Steve was spreading newspapers on the floor, untying bundles of books.

"What about Katie?" he asked.

"I can't afford to keep her, but she's taking a room nearby, and swears she'll be in each morning to straighten up."

"Gail—if there's anything I can do—"

"Not anything more, Steve. You've given me the best pep talk on record. . . . Tell me, have you any idea how much longer you'll be in town?"

"Father's doing the big job on my shoulder in about ten days," Steve replied. "When it's reasonably well, I'm to report in Washington."

"I'll miss you, Steve."

He smiled whimsically, "I won't be ringing any jodels either. . . . Incidentally, may I take you to your cousin's wedding?"

"Yes. But I don't feel very festive."

NOTHING IS IMPOSSIBLE

OLD HANDS at duplicate bridge almost never say "that result is impossible," or that a certain player could not possibly get into a certain contract which is written down on the score slip. They have learned that lots of things, which you would never think of normally, occur at the bridge table. Who would ever consider that a player got into a particular contract because, when he originally sorted his hand, he put a club among his spades, or a diamond among his hearts, or vice versa?

"Give in, blazes could North get into that contract?" he exclaimed. "It's impossible. He had only three spades."

Then the tournament director was summoned and inquired of the spade declarer what had happened. Sure enough, that worthy had bid spades. He opened with 1-club, South bid 1-Heart, North 1-Spade and South 3-Spades. Then North noticed that his spade 4 was really the club 4. He tried to repair the damage then by bidding 3-No Trumps, but South took him out to 4-Spades. Afraid to cause any more trouble, he passed. Beck Backing Schwellenbach For Secretary of Labor Post To Congress Struggle

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Dave Beck, powerful West Coast boss of the AFL Teamsters Union, is reported backing Federal Judge Lewis B. Schwellenbach to succeed Frances Perkins as labor secretary, when and if she resigns. Observers here take this to mean that Beck's boss, Dan Tobin, president of the union, is no longer seriously in the running for the job, despite AFL assurance that Tobin is still the organization's only candidate.

Beck hails from Seattle and, of course, is well acquainted with Schwellenbach, who represented the state in the Senate from 1935 to 1941. In addition, Schwellenbach is said to have strong support from the Railroad Brotherhoods and was a close friend of President Truman when both were in the Senate.

Business Women's Club Honors Girl Graduates

Mrs. Huffman Is Speaker At Banquet

Following a custom that has existed almost as long as the club the Business and Professional Women's club again entertained the girls of the 1945 graduation class of the Circleville high school at the annual banquet in the Pickaway Arms restaurant, Tuesday evening.

For the occasion the dining room never looked more lovely with the soft glow of many candles shedding a dim light over the guests and the fragrance of roses filling the air. The tables were arranged so all could face the speakers table which was placed at the end of the large room.

Each table was decorated with small red rose buds intermingling with fern leaves and surrounding crystal candle holders containing tall white lighted tapers. Neat programs, in red and white, the class colors, were also used as place cards and added much to the attractiveness of the tables. At the places of each graduate was a cellophane-wrapped clothes brush and for the club members and guests a plastic key ring, gifts of the Kippy Kit company, whose secretary, Mrs. Evelyn Goeller, is a member of the club. The committee with Miss Wilmina Phibbs as chairman, Mrs. Alice Sensenbrenner, Mrs. Joseph Work and Miss Peggy Parks were responsible for the decorations.

As the group gathered around the tables the president, Mrs. Jean Bostwick asked them to repeat in unison the Business Women's collect. A delicious two-course dinner was served to 64 members and guests.

At the conclusion of the dinner Mrs. Bostwick introduced the chairman of the program committee, Mrs. Guy Campbell and her assistants, Miss Rose Good and Mrs. Wilbur Funk, who then took charge of the meeting.

Miss Clara Southward welcomed the graduates to which a response was made by Miss Miriam Turner, valedictorian of the class. Miss Eleanor Snyder sang "Musetta's Waltz Song" from the opera Le-homme and "Let My Song Fill Your Heart" by Ernest Charles. She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Abbe Mills Clarke. Mrs. Campbell introduced the members of the class to the club members and the guests. Mrs. Flora W. Huffman, president of the Business and Professional Women's club of Columbus was introduced by Mrs. Campbell, as the speaker of the evening.

It was not a "sweet and entertaining" talk filled with light words and beautiful pictures of the future that Mrs. Huffman gave to the graduates. Rather she painted them a picture of work and responsibilities for the future, warning them that they would be the ones to whom the world would look for guidance as they were the representatives of the new era. She spoke at length of their obligations as citizens of this changing world and as business women to which she urged them to aspire. She pointed out to them the brilliant work of women in the business world of today and contrasted the work of women in the first world war. Never, she said has there been such opportunities and privileges open to women in business as there is today. The world is just coming to the realization of the ability of women in business. She urged the members of the class to broaden their education if possible, to be able to mingle with our neighbors to the South of us, the natives of Central and North America. Some day, Mrs. Huffman predicted, if this is neglected we will be the minority in-

LOW-DOWN THIEF TAKES FAMILY'S RED POINTS

Mrs. John Hill wouldn't have minded so much if her imitation pearl choker had been stolen... but her precious red points! The crime was revealed when she discovered that extra red points were going into the garbage can simply because she wasn't saving odd bits of fat, as well as the easy amounts from frying.

Now she saves every scrap of fat trimmed off meat or left on plates. Once a week she melts it down, pours it into the salvage can. It adds up to more points for the Hill family. More fat to help make war- and home-front essentials. Hooray!

Mother-Daughter Banquet

The outstanding social event of the Spring season for the members of the first United Brethren church was the Mothers Daughters banquet which was held Tuesday evening in the parish house with 90 mothers, daughters and friends present. The affair was sponsored by the members of the Otterbein guild.

The delicious dinner was served at long tables in the dining room which was artistically decorated in a color scheme of purple and white with a profusion of iris in these colors being used in the decorations. The members of the Ladies Aid society of the church served the dinner.

Mrs. J. E. Huston was in charge of the program which followed the dinner. Miss Lucile Kirkwood opened with a piano solo and Mrs. Montford Kirkwood rendered a beautiful Mothers Day vocal solo. Mrs. Montford Kirkwood then led in a prayer of thanksgiving.

Eulogies of fine, courageous living women were then given by Mrs. J. E. Kirkwood, Mrs. Porter Martin, Mrs. Kenneth Shook and Mrs. Clarence Radcliff. The hymn, "Faith of our Mothers" was then sung by the group and Mrs. James Trimmer read an article "Treasured Memories". "Mother's Bible" was the subject of the talk that was given by Miss Delores Hawks. Marguerite Martin paid a tribute to mothers and the program closed with a special song to Mothers by the Otterbein Guild girls.

Arrangements have been completed for the joint meeting of the Pickaway county garden club with the Ashville and Williamsport clubs at the Pickaway Arms restaurant, June 1.

$2 BILL COLLECTION STOLEN
FORT WORTH, Tex.—W. O. Compton has decided the old superstition that $2 bills are unlucky is correct. His hobby, until recently, was collecting $2 bills. He had about a hundred of them in a strong box in his restaurant. Burglars who entered through a hole in the roof, cut for a ventilating fan, damaged a new and empty $500 cash register beyond repair—and then took the strong box containing the $2 bills.

Raccoon Climbs Courthouse
BLOOMINGTON, Ind.—A raccoon, chased up a wall by a dog, or in search of pigeon eggs, thrilled crowds by climbing to a second-story ledge of Monroe county courthouse. Firemen wearing heavy gloves retrieved the animal, and the coon was turned over to the game warden.

CIRCLE CITY 10 GRABS 3-1 WIN

Grover's Homer In Sixth Breaks Up Pitching Duel Under Lights

Circle City squeaked out a 3-1 victory over Coca Cola under the Ted Lewis park lights Tuesday in the second night softball league game of the season.

Circle City took a 1-0 lead in the first inning but Coca Cola tied the score in the second and it remained that way until the last of the sixth. With Rowland on base Warren Grover blasted a home run which gave the dairy-men the victory.

C. Hill gave Circle City only six hits. Coca Cola got three off Elliott in the first three innings and none off Liston who took over at the start of the fourth frame.

Wednesday night Stansbury-Stout is scheduled to meet Williamsport.

COLONELS HANG ON TO AA LEAD; BIRDS IN SPLIT

By United Press
Louisville retained its lead in the American Association standings by a few lone percentage points today after coming out on the losing end of a 7 to 2 contest with the seventh-place Kansas City Blues.

A scheduled game between Louisville's two closest contenders, the Milwaukee Brewers and the Indianapolis Indians, was rained out. The Colonels' latest defeat all but eliminated their lead over the second-place Brewers and put them a scant half game in front of the Indians.

In a twilight twin-bill at St. Paul, the Saints and the Columbus Red Birds split a pair. The first went to St. Paul, 6 to 4, and the second was awarded to the Red Birds, leading 8 to 0 when the game was called in the sixth.

Toledo came back in the third and fourth innings to offset a three-run lead Minneapolis set up in the second half of the first at Minneapolis. The Mud Hens held the Millers to seven scattered hits and were ahead, 7 to 5, when the game ended.

Today's games: Columbus at Milwaukee, Toledo at Kansas City, Indianapolis at St. Paul and Toledo at Minneapolis. (All night games.)

EAST AND WEST TEAMS TO MEET

Giants May Be Slowed Down At Cincinnati; East To See Pete Gray

NEW YORK, May 23—The National League goes West today and the American League moves East, and the trips are necessary for the leaders of both leagues—if they are to prove their rights to the leads.

Mel Ott's New York Giants, pace-makers in the National League with 21 victories in 25 games, most of them at the Polo grounds, play a night game at Cincinnati. This four-game Giant-Reds series probably will be the most closely-watched of the East-West meetings.

Some observers claim that they've been winning on "cheap" home runs dropping into the short left field and right field corners at New York. Home runs at Cincinnati demand a lousy sock. Cincinnati Manager Bill McKechnie also knows the batting weaknesses of Ernie Lombardi, Giant catcher who leads the major leagues with 9 homers. If Lombardi is muffled, the Giants may find the going tough in their first western swing.

New York has lost its last two games, both against Pittsburgh. The second-place Brooklyn Dodgers meet St. Louis in four night games, beginning tonight, and must win at least once to hold second against the rallying Cardinals. Brooklyn hopes in this 14-game western swing are not enhanced by knowledge that star catcher Mickey Owen may not even play all of the St. Louis games before entering the Army.

Boston plays at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia at Chicago in the other games. The Cubs were strong pre

NEWS Behind the NEWS

hind the proposal is that the pouring out of more money to those who are at work will take up the slack of national income development from loss of jobs. As a generalization, it sounds equitable, but will it work specifically?

Such tremendous unearned wage increases of 20 to 40 per cent of a special type of worker, to the exclusion of others, must necessitate great price increases which those who have received no such increases can hardly pay. It is therefore an unequal solution, furthermore, it sponsors further inflation and decline in the value of the dollar.

Yet to let the condition run may help to solve this primary feature of the problem.

Millions of war workers are inefficient, unskilled labor, which received far more pay than their services were worth, but which is now determined to keep those overpaid jobs in preference to returning to their former lower paid work.

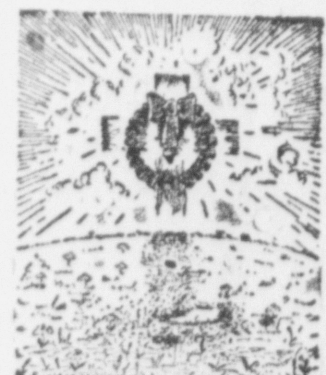

The want-ad section of every newspaper is begging for workers. A considerable portion of the unemployed must eventually take these lower paid jobs, but there is no rush to take them among the affluent ex-war workers.

The only thing I can see for sure is Mr. Truman is facing his first acid test.

HOOSIER EGGS STAND, TOO
VALPARAISO, Ind.—Another egg-standing story comes from Mrs. Clayton Reif Kouts, who says that her Hoosier hens are no clucks when it comes to egg-standing. Her hens' eggs not only stand on the rounded end, but also on the pointed end. One stood on the rounded end on a window sill all night.

EX-CLERK DONATES $10,000
AUGUSTA, Me.—In the 1890's, Theron D. Reed struggled as a clerk at the Augusta State (Mental) Hospital and studied law in his spare time. Now a successful lawyer in Ferndale, Cal., he recently sent the institution $10,000 to set up a patients' recreation fund.

Yes, the Seventh War Loan is on right now!

There are new planes to be built... new tanks... new ships. All to bring the war to an earlier close.

Our fighting men will do their job. But we must do ours!

And right now, the most important job we have is to meet our personal quotas in the Seventh War Loan drive!

Those quotas are big. Uncle Sam needs $7,000,000,000 from individuals. For this loan is really 2 in 1—there had been 2 drives in 1944, by this time. So now—we've got to do a two-loan job in one.

But Americans I have never failed to meet a War Bond quota yet—and we won't fail now! So find out what your quota is—and meet it!
